Name:	Pearce Sanders
Organisation:	Flatiron Constructors
Author's background:	Currently working in British Columbia on a new transmission line project for BC Hydro. I am a field engineer manager for construction operations, as well as internal office work. Managing and operating all aspects of foundation construction and tower erection operations. This entails cost-report forecasting, weekly cost and quantity tracking, reporting to upper management, devising weekly schedules, and checking off on quality control. The project is moving towards close out phase, and with that I am taking on more contractual tasks for significant completion. I enrolled in the ICM Masters program to progress my education and career towards not just construction management, but also have that global background. I hope to better understand how to effectively work and manage people involved in international construction activities. I desire to work in the management field in a traveling position that can take me anywhere around the globe.
